

A photograph of a modern bathroom vanity. A white, bowl-shaped ceramic sink is mounted on a countertop made of small, square mosaic tiles. A sleek, chrome faucet with a curved spout is mounted on the wall behind the sink. In the foreground, a clear glass soap dish holds a bar of soap. To the right of the sink, a glass of water with a toothbrush inside sits on the countertop. The background is a wall of similar mosaic tiles, and a window with a view of greenery is visible on the right.

With the Bacino console washbasin, Duravit set a trend that continues unabated today. A small but attractive range, Bacino enables both modern and distinctive washing area solutions for private bathrooms, powder rooms and hotels. Bacino can be combined with the Fogo furniture range, as well as with other console materials, such as stone, concrete or glass mosaic.

(1, 4) The purely cylindrical, barrel-shaped Bacino console basin, with Fogo console, wall-mounted and with drawers below. 46 cm high, 37 cm in diameter and a deep inside basin without tap panel and overflow make the basin particularly unique. The ceramic valve cover adds the ultimate finishing touch to the inside. (2, 3) The console basin in the "rectangular" variant with softened corners, also with furniture console.
